

Hatvany Lily Baroness (1890-1967 Nov., N.Y.)

("Kikicsoda?" Bp) (7770)

Leonard Lyons' column, 1941 June 12
(Washington Post)

HOPE: The Baroness Lili Hatvany, who now is working at the M.G.M. studios in Hollywood, listened to a group of writers there lamenting the news of the day—the Nazi capture of Crete, the German planes in Syria, and the threatened drive around Turkey . . . "Let me remind you of one thing," was the Baroness' cheering contribution. "In one thousand years of history, Hungary has never been on the winning side of a war."

She allegedly used to be the sweetheart of Sigmund Kunfi

Jessie Thompson's

"diaries do indeed confess to emotional engagements with other women. Especially bizarre is the fact that one of the women involved was the Baroness Hatvany."

See: Bard, Josef