

An unabashed, lifetime love affair with all—or most—of America, and with life—as only the author of SHOW BOAT, SO BIG, GIANT, and A PECULIAR TREASURE could live it...and tell it.

EDNA FERBER A Kind of Magic

Edna Ferber looks at her native land today and yesterday with unquenchable but sometimes astringent affection. She translates her vision into a powerful portrait of the United States through twenty-five years of war, peace, and the pursuit of prosperity. She tells of building a Connecticut dream house after A PECULIAR TREASURE; of being threatened with lynching by Texans after GIANT; of being in Paris on V.E. Day and in Washington on the day Roosevelt died. She speaks out frankly and pungently on everything from Walden Pond to Israel... from the American woman — and man — to American cooking.

It may be that zest for life, pride in work, and love of country are no longer considered "fashionable"—but they do make exhilarating and heartening reading here. Written with the exuberance, vitality, and keen observation that have captured millions of readers, you will find this one of the rare great autobiographies—a book and an individual that will become treasured friends.
