Pictures of sons on
N. Y. business trip

By CHOLLY KNICKERBOCKER

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—Andreï Porumbeanu — typewriter heiress Gamble Benedict's raison d'être — was in New York on business, flashing pictures of the two Porumbeanu sons, who now are also heirs . . . Marquesa Carol de Portago is still living in Hong Kong (rumors had her leaving) and she'll hang up her Christmas stocking there this year . . . The Bahamas will lose the Yvor Bryces this winter as their terrific Nassau house is up for rent. They plan an African safari.

Princess Grace now wears her glasses in public more often than not . . . The remarks made by Eva Gabor about Portland Mason on "Girl Talk" will be enjoyed by many but not by Mrs. Mason . . .

The beautiful dinner party of the season was Louise Gore's at her Potomac, Md., home. She is the new Congresswoman from Maryland, touted by many as the next governor of that State.

RUMORS DENIED

Tennis star Don Budge is busy denying that he has secretly wed, pointing out that he isn't yet divorced . . . A new "get-away-from-it-all" spot for Smart Set weekenders is Ashley Chanler's picturesque hideaway on City Island within sight of Manhattan skyscrapers. Ashley, an Astor descendant, and his beauteous Helen are right at home in this famous yacht haven.

Jacqueline Kennedy's mother, Mrs. Hugh Auchincloss, has gone on record as saying that the best ball gown for a woman over 50 is a simple white brocade . . . Lenka Billings of local cafe society, has just bought out Felix Young's interest in Maxim's, a popular Miami Beach restaurant. She is, incidentally, a steady two-some with Zoldan Gombos, publisher of America's leading Hungarian daily paper.
