László Magyar szöve: Krisztus és a mennyország, Detroit 1933
(152) rwn

He started out as a talented short story writer in the early years of the 20 century - stories appeared in

"Magyar hírmondó" edited by Louis Kaczmarsky together with the early works of Gyula Krúdy.

He was an easy-going, jolly fellow, very popular everywhere, nicknamed "Lajbis" by his friends.

He was born in Nagyvárasd, son of a lawyer - was friend of Ady, who corresponded with him. When he was the priest in Pittsburgh, he showed me a bunch of letters + postcards, written to him by Ady
