

Kossuth is coming!

Shoe store advertisement

He comes! he comes! the good, the great Kossuth!
Remarkable in deeds! Invincible in truth!
He lebor'd, fought, and wisely ran away,
To get new strength and fight some other day.
But "Taylor and Noe" will ne'er refuse
Gainst every toe to make good Boots and Shoes.
No earthly power shall drive them from the field,
While there are feet to clothe and legs to shield!
If times get dull and money scarcer grows,
They'll labor still for good of human toes;
And nobly fight with leather, wax and thread
To live like men, and earn their honest bread.

With judgment, skill, and scientific light,
They'll scan each foot with knowledge and delight.
Exactly fit each mother, man and child
And to be bunions, corns and blisters mild.
If Kossuth comes! and wants a man to meet,
He'll find that man 9 fifty Mulberry Street!
A man to fight, or preach or mend his shoes!
To teach the way of life, and spread good news!
Come maidens! Men! all who have feet may come!
And Taylor and Nee, you'll find at home.
Only remember, when you seek our door
'Tis Mulberry 59, not less, nor more.

Anonymous

From: Newark, N.J., Advertiser,
Oct. 29, 1851.

