Bako, Elemer. GUIDE TO HUNGARIAN STUDIES. Stanford, California: Hoover Institution Press, 1973. 1218 pages, $35.00.

This is a bibliography of diversified materials and is intended to provide a practical tool for the English reader, particularly scholars and college students. It includes books, journals, pamphlets, scholarly and popular articles, reviews, reports, maps, and music, published in a number of languages, including Hungarian, English, French, German, and Latin.

An introduction provides an overview of Hungarian history, and a chronology covers the entire scope of the history of Hungary from the 4th millennium B.C. to 1965. An index of personal names, and index of periodicals and serials, and extensive cross-references are included. Standard research tools are incorporated, such as general and special bibliographies, handbooks, directories, encyclopedia and dictionaries, trade lists, indexes and catalogues, popular and scholarly works, collections of documents, monographs, surveys, reports and reviews, serialized publications, audiovisual aids, facimile or microfilmed editions, and typed and mimeographed works.
