

FARAGO, John
(Son of Ladislav Farago)

John Farago to Wed Miss Cramer

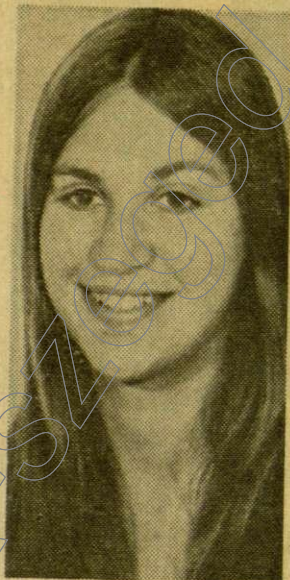

Special to The New York Times

GLENCOE, Ill., Aug. 12—The engagement of Miss Sharon Ann Cramer to John Michael Farago has been announced by Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Cramer, parents of the future bride. Her fiancé is the son of Ladislav Farago, author of the current best-seller "The Game of the Foxes," and Mrs. Farago of New York and New Milford, Conn.

Miss Cramer attended the Universities of Wisconsin and Illinois and Boston University and is an alumna of Tufts University. This year she received a Master of Arts in teaching degree from Harvard University. Her parents are in the furniture and interior design business in Wilmette and Hubbard Woods.

The prospective bridegroom, an honors graduate of the Horace Mann School in New York, received a B.A. and an M.A.T. degrees simultaneously this year from Harvard. In the fall he will study stage direction at the California Institute of the Arts.

His father is the author

Miss Sharon A. Cramer

also of "Patton: Ordeal and Triumph," on which the film "Patton" was based and "The Broken Seal," which was made into the motion picture, "Tora, Tora, Tora."

New York Times, 1972 Aug. 13